

How do you approach assignment or essay questions? – Transcript

Robert: Does it flow well? I think that's really important, because you've always got to think if someone else were reading this are they going to be interested in it?

Are they going to think it's good?

I think having a clear structure and for each paragraph to go in quite a fluent way, and that you can follow your line of argument or your line of thought is very important.

Magda: The first thing I do, I mean maybe because I come from a research background, my first degree was history and my second was politics, I just do a fun thing, I do a Google search sometimes.

Before you know the Internet I just go in the library and I look around, I'd have chats with my classmates.

And also just think about it, just have a piece of paper and I brainstorm anything, from something silly to serious ideas, and what that does is kind of free your mind, and then you can kind of, slowly but surely, kind of get to the nitty-gritty of it.
